

A Radiant Christmas

Leung Hoi Kiu

On this Christmas morn, snowflakes softly descend,
Milk and cookies, patiently they attend.

Candles aglow, casting their gentle light,
Stars above, shimmering through the night.

Beneath the tree, gifts yearn to be unveiled,
A joyous chorus, where sadness is curtailed.

Laughter resounds, a melody so clear,
Friends and kindred spirits, drawing near.

Love and kindness, their virtues they display,
No room for rudeness, anger held at bay.

Warm embraces, sealed with tender kiss,
Dogs cease their fights, replaced by gentle bliss.

In this enchanting hour, hearts take flight,
Merry Christmas to all, as you shine so bright.
